NOTE FROM JOHN RIEK CHAIR OF THE NATIONAL NGO STEERING COMMITTEE OF THE SOUTH SUDAN NGO FORUM

This year (2019) has been particularly challenging for citizens and aid workers alike. Challenges stretched from insecurity, numerous bureaucratic impediments, the abduction and killing of our colleagues - humanitarian aid workers.

We are delighted to share in the fourth annual National NGO Expo 2019 under the theme, National NGOs for peace and sustainable development. Our special appreciation goes to the donors, RRC, UN, INGOs and private companies for your support during this important event.

The fact that many of you found the time to be here serves as a reminder to us all just how valued the work of National NGOs is to our country. This encourages and motivates us as National NGOs to work harder towards saving and improving the lives of South Sudanese wherever we can.

This year (2019) has been particularly challenging for citizens and aid workers alike. Challenges stretched from insecurity, numerous bureaucratic impediments, the abduction and killing of our colleagues - humanitarian aid workers. This year's theme, National NGOs for peace and sustainable development summarises what we all desire for our country and what we as National NGOs and citizens remain committed to in spite of the challenges environment we continue to work in.

NATIONAL NGOs

APPEAL FOR PEACE, FREE DELIVERY OF HUMANITARIAN SERVICES

UNDER THE THEME, “National NGO’s for Peace and Sustainable Development, the national non-governmental organizations expressed hope and desire to pursue peace, recovery, and development across South Sudan.

By Lydia Bako, Brisker Magazine

Representatives of national non-governmental organisations have made a solemn appeal for realisation of peace in South Sudan in order to deliver humanitarian services across the country freely.

The call was made during the 4th National NGO Expo at Juba Grand Hotel, which took place from 28th to 30th November 2019. Annually, since 2015, members of national non-government organisations come together to showcase their programming in areas of humanitarian assistance such as food security, education, protection, health, water and sanitation, distribution on non-food items, peace building, democracy and good governance, access to justice, camp coordination and management, advocacy, and shelter.

The NGO EXPO 2019 attracted many participants including staff from the national and international organisations, and representatives from United Nations agencies, representatives of diplomatic missions, government offices, media houses, students, the private sector and the general public.

Speaking at the opening ceremony, the National NGO focal point at the Forum emphasised on the exposition that provided an opportunity for members to show what they were doing in areas such as health, nutrition, livelihoods, education and protection.

“NNGO’s are largely seen as the first respondents wherever there is conflict or humanitarian crisis,” said Mat Gai, the NNGO coordinator.

“Sometimes,” he went on, “they are so busy doing work in a village in Yei, Maiwut or Renk that they should be showcasing so that they can be helped to do more work.”

The NGO Forum Secretariat, which coordinates international and national non-governmental organisations to support its members in the most “effective and principled” delivery of humanitarian aid in South Sudan to save and improve lives, according to its director, Dr. Pius Ojara.

Under the theme, “National NGO’s for Peace and Sustainable Development,” the national non-governmental organizations expressed hope and desire to pursue peace, recovery, and development across South Sudan.

“This year’s theme is a reflection of the aspiration of our people which is peace. As humanitarian actors during our interaction with the community the common message or the desire of the people is for peace to prevail in our nation,” Robert Gima, NNGO EXPO 2019 Committee Chair, emphasised.

“Development is one of the key humanitarian sectors. We do not want to do emergency programs for ages but to shift to recovery because, this is what the people of South Sudan want,” John Riek, Chairperson of the NNGO Steering Committee, said in his keynote address.

“We need the people not to rely on aid delivery, but to see what they can do in their potentials,” he added.

He added that NNGOs are working hard to make sure the aid delivery and development realised in the current emergency context. “NNGOs are reaching out to almost 700,000 people who are in dire needs right now in different locations across the country.” Mr. Riek went ahead to appeal to the government and opposition to bring peace so that the humanitarian services are not impeded and for NNGOs to implement recovery to ensure that development is recognised.

“I would like the government and opposition to bring peace so that humanitarian services are not hindered. We as humanitarian actors, our mandate is to save the lives of the people. But if there is no peace, our work could not move on properly.”

Hon. Manase Lomole Waya, the Chairperson of the Relief and Rehabilitation Commission (RRC), was one of the esteemed guests. He applauded the effort and passionate work of the NGO Forum for effectively coordinating aid delivery and promoting peace and development in South Sudan.

“The South Sudan NGO Forum has made remarkable contribution towards the promotion of peace and sustainable development in various ways,” said Hon. Lomole, who chairs the humanitarian wing of the Ministry of Disaster Management and Humanitarian Affairs.

He said the South Sudan NGO Forum has served as a central point in the networking of 263 NNGO’s and 116 international NGO’s. As well as being able to foster unity amongst different sectors that provide support to the South Sudanese people.

“As government agency working closely with the NGO Forum and INGO’s, we are aware of many challenges that NNGO’s are facing. The most persistent ones are inadequate funding, and working in risk-taking situation,” he said.

Hon. Lomole made a personal appeal to the NNGO’s to:

1. Identify actual areas of need all over the country and address those needs to the best of their ability even with the little funds they obtain. And to try and stretch the dollar thin to cover more than what the donor(s) expect.
2. On recruitment, NGO Forum, RRC, and Ministry of Labour developed Recruitment Guide 2019 that ensures 80% of NGO staffs are nationals. Recruiting nationals (preferably graduates) in the organizations (NNGOs and INGOs) and also observe them for a while (during the probation period) and if they do not perform as required, dismiss them.
3. “Ensure there is proper monitoring, evaluation, and reporting. Sometimes we are regarded as corrupt not because we have taken anything but because we have not kept records”.
4. “Focus and pay close attention to the service of our people. Be agents of transformation of our nation”.

Dr. Mary Otieno, UNFPA Country Representative, said she was delighted to meet with the men and women who sacrifice daily in every difficult and challenging circumstance to the needs of the most vulnerable communities in the remotest parts of the country. “National and local organisations contribute significantly to the humanitarian responses in South Sudan through their approximation to disaster affected communities. Their understanding of the culture, language and their sensitivity in political and social dynamics. Because of these, the responses of international actors like us are enabled and strengthened,” said Dr. Otieno.

The three-day exhibition, which drew together 69 NNGO’s and 12 private sectors and partners, featured performances from school children, poem from Flavia the poet, humanitarian voices documentary video, musical performances from Ana Taban Arts Initiative, advocacy drama, comedy and programs documentary videos from NNGO’s.

Hon. Hussein Mar Nyuot, Minister of Humanitarian Affairs and Disaster Management, presented awards to 8 NNGO’s for best performance and exhibition on the last day of the exhibition.

The categories of the award were as follows: Best Success Story, Most Innovative Peace Making Initiative, Most Innovative Women Empowering Initiative, Most Innovative Youth Empowering Initiative, Most Innovative State Society Relationship Building Initiative, Most Innovative Social Enterprising Initiative, Most Creative Exhibition, and Most Courageous initiatives.

“As NNGOs, as much as we need donor funding and partnership with UN and international organizations, I encourage all of us also to fix our houses. Make sure you deliver, showcase what you’re doing, communicate, and document evident based intervention”

Elijah Manyok Jok, Executive Director, Smile Again Africa Development Organization (SAADO)

“National NGOs should not compete among themselves but rather work together for the great good and to get supported. When you (NNGO) have a project that cannot be run by one NGO form a consortium. Your unity is very important.”

Hon. Hussein Mar Nyot, Minister of Humanitarian Affairs & Disaster management

“In recognition of the effort by local and national respondents in the humanitarian sector, we must all ensure our partnership practices accelerate localizations of humanitarian actions and strengthen long term recovery and sustainable development in South Sudan.”

AWARD FOR BEST SUCCESS STORY

BHECO works closely with the Ministry of Health and other health-related development agencies. BHECO has implemented successful projects in maternal and new born health in collaboration with communities and other partners. The latest project which forms our success story here is the provision of low-cost treatment or solution to cord infection in children. BHECO with support from Ministry of Health piloted a project aimed at promoting newborn health at community level. The project made chlorhexidine gel available for cord care for newborns; however, for easy distribution, the chlorhexidine gel was bundled (innovatively) into safe delivery kit (SDK). UN reports (2018) indicate that in South Sudan newborn deaths account for 40% of the overall death of which 20% is attributed to infections.

Although, there are other common causes of newborn death in South Sudan more than infections such as premature births, asphyxia and pneumonia, infection of the cord is frequent and serious among the community births yet preventable. Child mortality remains an important challenge for community health, with a rate of 40 mortalities per 1,000 live births. Many families still use traditional methods, such as covering the baby's navel with Ash, cow dung, soil mixed with oil, use of milky fluid from Leben- Leben and Burt papyrus products. However, the distribution of innovative cord care conducted through Community Health Workers (CHWs) for home births greatly contributed to the reduction of newborn mortality. This umbilical ointment prevents deadly infections and eases the healing process. Application of CHX gel to the newborn umbilical cord in high risky setting has shown to reduce severe infection by 75% and mortality by 23%. The innovation is evidence based, cost effective and low cost intervention that significantly reduce newborn deaths. The need for practical strategy and implementation plan of this life saving, low cost commodity is enormous, BHECO worked MOH, UNICEF and WHO to support this initiative.

More than 2,000 newborns have received this umbilical care. The innovation contributed to the reduction of cord infections of newborn to 17% (Intervention) and mortality to 6.5% (Intervention) with those not receiving having high infections of as high as 38.7% and mortality reduction of 14.3%. The current goal of MOH and Government is to ensure that 40% of the newborn receive CHX gel distributed through the health facility and BHI. It is expected that the strategy will save 0.48 million newborns if successfully scale up. With the success of the initial project, MOH is quickly adopting the use of innovative cord care.

AWARD FOR MOST COURAGEOUS NNGO

Lacha Community Economic Development (LCED) is a non-profit national NGO established and registered legally since 2008 in South Sudan; since then it has been engaging in providing humanitarian and development programming.

LCED specializes in WASH, NFI/Shelter in emergency and FSL programmes. In WASH it rehabilitated boreholes and ensured their sustainability through formation and training of water management committees in raising funds, managing community members and repair and maintenance of boreholes.

Another interesting aspect of LCED which makes that strong and courageous is the feedback mechanism. They ensure that in all their projects, there is adequate community consultation and participation; in that they ensure that community members provide feedback about the project through a mechanism that receives community feedback, complains are resolved and response sent to communities. This increases community ownership and participation in projects.

Despite inadequate funds; LCED has embarked on its course with community and members support.
